Items that are part of a personal collection are not normally included in the Archives collection. However, some personal materials are so closely associated with the history and development of the institution that their inclusion may be deemed significant and appropriate.